Developing Shared Expectations for Graduate Advisors and Graduate Students

1. Communication and meetings:

- a. What is the best way/technology to get a hold of each other? What is the appropriate time frame to expect a response, including when either faculty or graduate student is away from campus?
- b. When do you plan to meet (be specific)? How is the agenda decided? How long will the meeting be? What kinds of meetings are more useful in the studio, and what kinds of meetings are more useful in an office?
- c. How are the next steps identified after a meeting? How do you agree on action items?
- d. Agreement on how to use the MFA handbook relative to contact individual advisor?
- e. Distinction between year advisor and thesis chair.

2. Professional goals:

Identify short-term and long-term goals, and discuss any steps/resources/training necessary to accomplish the goals. (Sweetland Writing Center, CRLT, CWPS, others?)

5. Discuss disciplinary norms around sharing work:

What are good ways to get informal feedback on Work-in-Progress? What are ways to begin getting work into circulation outside the Department and University?

6. Opportunities for feedback:

- a. In what form and how often can the student expect to receive feedback regarding overall progress and other professional activities (teaching, outreach, and presentation skills)?
- b. What are the best times to invite people into your process? When do you start sharing ideas in conversation? When do you invite people into rehearsal?
- c. How far ahead of time should the student circulate written work (grant drafts, proposals-in-process, etc.) to the mentor and/or other committee members? How much time is needed by the faculty member to provide feedback?
- d. How should feedback from multiple faculty members be handled – especially if the readings and reactions contradict one another? (Always remembering that disagreement and dissensus can be incredibly generative.)
